Biography

Austin Pettis is a former NFL wide receiver and one of the most accomplished players in Boise State Broncos football history. Known for his elite route running, reliability, and football IQ, Pettis built a standout career that translated to the professional level, where he competed against the best in the game.

Following his playing career, Pettis transitioned into coaching, where he has quickly established himself as one of the top offensive minds at the high school and 7v7 levels. He currently serves as Offensive Coordinator at Orange Lutheran High School, a premier program competing in the nationally recognized Trinity League, widely regarded as one of the most competitive high school football conferences in the country.

In addition, Pettis is the Offensive Coordinator for Cali Power 7v7, the nation’s premier 7v7 organization, working with many of the top high school recruits in the country. In this role, he develops elite skill players, helping them refine their technique, football IQ, and ability to perform in high-level competitive environments.

Pettis combines his NFL experience with a deep understanding of modern offensive systems to train and mentor the next generation of athletes. His coaching philosophy emphasizes precision, discipline, and preparation—equipping players with the tools needed to succeed at the collegiate and professional levels.

Statement

As a former NFL Wide Receiver and lifelong competitor, I’m passionate about developing elite receivers and complete offensive players. My mission is to mentor, teach, and prepare athletes to succeed at the highest level—on the field and in life—through discipline, detail, and a pro mindset.
