Biography

Kenny Boyer is an accomplished football coach and educator with over a decade of experience spanning high school, college, and professional football. A former student-athlete at Jackson State University, where he competed as a wide receiver and was a three-time SWAC All-Conference hurdler, Kenny brings a player-first perspective to every level of the game.

Kenny holds three degrees — a B.S. in Mathematics Education from Jackson State University, an M.S. in Physical Education with Athletic Administration from North Carolina Central University, and an Education Specialist degree in Educational Leadership from Northwest Missouri State University.

His coaching career has taken him from MEAC Championship sidelines at North Carolina Central University to the professional ranks with the St. Louis Battlehawks of the UFL, where he served as an Offensive Assistant and later as Assistant General Manager. He most recently served as an Offensive Analyst and Assistant Wide Receivers Coach at Lindenwood University.

At the high school level, Kenny has built a reputation as a developer of talent and a builder of winning programs and coaching multiple Division I prospects. He is a member of the American Football Coaches Association (AFCA), the National Coalition of Minority Football Coaches (NCMFC), and was also a 2025 guest speaker at the NCMFC National Convention.

Statement

Football has been the foundation of my life — first as an athlete, then as an educator, and now as a coach dedicated to developing the next generation of players and leaders. From competing as a wide receiver and All-Conference hurdler at Jackson State University to coaching at the high school, collegiate, and professional levels, every experience has shaped my philosophy that great coaching is about far more than X's and O's.

I am passionate about creating opportunities for young coaches and players who look like me, which is why my involvement with the National Coalition of Minority Football Coaches is so meaningful to me. Representation matters, and I am committed to using my platform to open doors for those coming behind me.

Coaching is my calling. Every day I step on that field or into that meeting room, I bring everything I have — because the young men I coach deserve nothing less.
